HISTORICAL CATALOGUE
OF THE
OFFICERS AND GRADUATES
OF
The Columbian University,
WASHINGTON, D. C.,

1821-1891.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
PRESIDENT'S OFFICE

COMPILED BY
H. L. HODGKINS, A. M., 1883,
SECRETARY OF THE ALUMNI.

PUBLISHED BY THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION,
BYRON S. ADAMS, PRINTER,
WASHINGTON, D. C.
1891.

In the compilation of this catalogue all previously published historical catalogues and lists of graduates have been examined and collated and carefully compared with the manuscript records of the Trustees and Faculties. Much information has been obtained from cyclopædias of biography, while a large mass of facts was contributed by living alumni from more than a thousand of whom have been received replies to letters and circulars sent them. It is a matter of regret that the necessary limits of the catalogue made it impossible to give more extended notices of the many graduates who have attained eminence in their various walks of life.

From the nature of the publication absolute accuracy is impossible, but it is hoped that the errors are not numerous. Notwithstanding the most diligent efforts, it has not been possible to obtain information relating to several hundred graduates.

All interested are urged to send to the compiler such facts in their possession as will aid in making future editions of the catalogue more accurate and more complete.

NOTES AND EXPLANATIONS.

The names of Ministers of the Gospel are in italics.

Those to whose names an asterisk is prefixed are dead. Only those of whose deaths reliable information has been received are so marked, though it is probable that many others, especially among the early College and Medical graduates, are dead.

In the arrangement of information about each graduate, after stating his occupation and residence, all facts in relation to his connection with the University are given; then his birth-place, or if this is unknown, the state which was his legal residence when he entered the University; then follow the other facts of general interest.

If the name of a graduate occurs more than once, reference is made, by giving his degree and the year it was obtained, to the place where detailed information can be found.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

PRESIDENT WELLING is now preparing a history of the Columbian College and the Columbian University, which will be published by the U. S. Bureau of Education. The following sketch is intended to serve, for the time, as an uncritical summary of important events in the annals of the institution and to furnish a general view of the patient and persevering labors which, running through a period of seventy years, have laid for the Columbian University a foundation at once firm and broad. On this foundation Schools of learning have been built which now have their graduates in every State and Territory of the Union.

The Columbian College, in common with Harvard, Yale and Princeton, owes its origin to the zeal of a Christian Denomination for an educated Ministry. Early in the year 1817, the Rev. Luther Rice, a returned missionary from India, conceived the idea of founding a college in the city of Washington for the education of "gospel ministers" in the special service of the Baptist denomination of Christians. Around this School of Theology he projected Schools of Classical Culture, of Science and of Philosophy which should be entirely unsectarian in their disciplines and national in their aims.

In 1819 the Rev. Luther Rice, in company with the Rev. Obadiah B. Brown, the Rev. Spencer H. Cone and Enoch Reynolds, citizens of the District of Columbia, formed a "Literary Association" for the purpose of buying a lot of land, immediately adjoining the city of Washington and comprising 46½ acres, with the understanding that it should be held for the use of an educational establishment under the direction of the General Convention. They paid $7,000 for the land, and among the contributors to this sum are found the names of John Quincy Adams, William H. Crawford, and John C. Calhoun (members at that time of President Monroe's Cabinet), together with thirty-two Members of Congress, and many among the leading citizens of Washington.

In February, 1821, during the Presidency of James Monroe, a charter was procured from Congress erecting "The Columbian College in the District of Columbia," for the "sole and exclusive purpose of educating youth in the English, learned and foreign languages, the liberal arts, sciences and literature," with full power to confer all degrees "usually granted and conferred in colleges." The constituent Trustees named in the act of incorporation were Obadiah B. Brown, Luther Rice, Enoch Reynolds, Josiah Meigs, Spencer H. Cone, Daniel Brown, Return J. Meigs, Jr., Joseph Gibson, Joseph Cone, Thomas Corcoran, Burgiss Allison, Thomas Sewall and Joseph Thaw.

The first meeting of the constituent Board of Trustees of the College was held March 5, 1821. The Charter was then formally accepted, and on the next day the Rev. O. B. Brown was elected President of the Board, Enoch Reynolds, Secretary and Luther Rice, Treasurer. It was resolved that the College should be divided into two departments, the Classical and the Theological. It was planned that the Theological Department should be opened for the reception of students on the first Wednesday in September, 1821, and the Classical Department on the second Wednesday in January, 1822. The construction of a College building had been commenced in 1820, and it was completed in 1822 at a cost of about $35,000. Dr. Staughton, a native of England and an eminent pulpit orator, was elected as the first President of the institution.

The first circular of the College was issued June 27, 1821. It bore on its forefront the following statement: "This institution, originated by the Baptist General Convention, but of National locality, consideration, and benefit, is founded on the most liberal principles." In affirmance of this statement, the language of the 7th clause in the charter was textually recited; that "persons of every religious denomination shall be capable of being elected Trustees, nor shall any person, either as President, Professor, Tutor or pupil, be refused admittance into said College, or denied any of the privileges, immunities, or advantages thereof for or on account of his sentiments in matters of religion." The circular contained a warm endorsement of the College by President Monroe, who laid special emphasis on its National position and relations "if it should hereafter receive the proper encouragement." Members of the Cabinet, especially John Quincy Adams, Smith Thompson, Return J. Meigs (a constituent Trustee), John C. Calhoun, William Wirt, and John McLean, joined in this expression of sympathy. To this followed a declaration made by the Professors of Andover Theological Seminary (Doctors E. Porter, Leonard Woods, and Moses Stuart), to the effect that they considered the establishment of the Columbian College "as an event of great importance, and as likely to be of extensive and lasting utility to the best interest of men."

Attention is invited to these statements as indicating the broad aims of the men who founded the Columbian College.

It having been recommended that agents should be sent to England and other parts of Europe in order to investigate the best methods of higher education, as also to solicit funds, books, etc., for the College, the Trustees commissioned Prof. Alva Woods, of the College, and James M. Staughton (son of President Staughton), of the Medical School, to go abroad for this purpose. Prof. Woods visited the seats of higher learning at Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Paris, Geneva, Genoa, Milan, Florence, Bologna, Pavia, Verona, Venice, Rome, and Naples, gathering useful hints and, in England making collections for the benefit of the College. Among eminent Englishmen who thus contributed to the founding of the College (subscribing £50 or less) were the Chancellor of the Exchequer (the Right Honorable Nicholas Vansittart, Lord Bexley), the Bishop of Durham (the venerable and evangelical Dr. Shute Barrington, previously Bishop of Llandaff and of Salisbury), Joseph John Gurney (philanthropist), Alexander Baring (afterwards Lord Ashburton, who negotiated with Daniel Webster the Ashburton Treaty of 1842), William Wilberforce (philanthropist), Sir James Mackintosh (author and statesman), Joseph Butterworth (son of a Baptist Minister in Coventry, Member of parliament, co-founder of British and Foreign Bible Society and Treasurer of Wesleyan Foreign Missionary Society), Dr. Olinthus Gregory (biographer of Robert Hall and Professor in Woolwich College), Thomas Babington (uncle of Lord Macaulay), the Rev. Rowland Hill, (popular preacher), Dr. Edward Bickersteth (devotional author), Dr. Adam Clarke (Wesleyan divine, linguist, commentator on the Bible), John Rippon, D. D. (Baptist minister and hymnologist), the Rev. Joseph Ivimey (Baptist minister and biographer of Bunyan, Milton, and Kiffin), Hannah More (the popular authoress), and many others of distinction in church and state. The Hon. Richard Rush, at that time United States Minister in London, subscribed to the funds of the College and afterwards became one of its Trustees.

June 30, 1821, it was resolved to establish a Preparatory School, which should be strictly a fitting school for the College, the study of Latin being made obligatory on all its pupils.

The scheme of a Medical School had been projected as early as November 15, 1821, and a few days afterwards it was decided that a Law School should be established "at no distant day."

It was ordered that provision should be made for the pursuit of advanced studies. Luther Rice as early as 1822 projected the establishment of a "Philosophical Department" for the culture and encouragement of such studies, and this measure was formally adopted in 1823. A circular was addressed by the College to all military and naval officers of the United States, invoking their assistance in collecting illustrative materials and specimens for the use of the institution. The National character of the College, and the "university" range of its proposed studies, were thus emphasized at the beginning of the enterprise.

The first Commencement of the College was held on the 15th of December, 1824, the President of the United States, the Secretaries of State, of War, and of the Navy, leading members from both houses of Congress, and General Lafayette being present at the exercises.

At a later hour on the same day a formal address of welcome was made to General Lafayette by the President of the College, after which the General and his suite, the Secretary of State (John Quincy Adams), the Secretary of War (John C.

Calhoun), the Speaker of the House of Representatives (Henry Clay), and other distinguished citizens dined with the Faculty and Board of Trustees at the house of President Staughton.

On the 3d of February, 1826, a Law School was organized, and the Hon. William Cranch, LL. D., Chief Justice of the Circuit Court of the United States, and the Hon. William Thomas Carroll, afterwards Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, were appointed Professors in the School. The School was organized, but had only a short-lived existence at that date.

The attendance during the first year was very gratifying, but troubles soon arose. There were differences of opinion among the Trustees and other friends of the institution as to the relative importance of the Theological and the Classical Departments. This soon led to the almost total abandonment of the Theological Department, and the concentration of effort on the Classical.

More serious were the financial difficulties. Though there had been many contributions, the expenses had been heavy in the construction and equipment of suitable buildings and in the payment of salaries and other current expenses. The receipts from tuition fees were entirely inadequate to meet the regular expenses, and, with no productive endowment, an indebtedness was sure to arise and to grow. The plans of the projectors were on a more liberal scale than the contributions, and the reaction came in 1827 when the Faculty resigned in a body and the exercises were suspended. In the spring of 1828 the College reopened and from that date its progress has been steady, if at times slow. For the first fifteen years there was indeed a constant struggle rather for existence than for progress, and only the continued exertions and self-denying labors of Trustees and Faculty kept the College alive.

Yet during all this time faithful and learned Professors, serving for but meagre salaries, and refusing more liberal offers from other institutions, imparted instruction to students whose zeal and abilities have been proven by the honorable stations they have since attained in the service of the Church and the State.

Dr. Staughton resigned the presidency in 1827, and in 1828 the Rev. Stephen Chapin, D. D. was chosen as his successor.

On the 25th of September, 1836, occurred the death of the Rev. Luther Rice, the man to whom, more than any other, the founding of the College was due.

In the tribute paid to his memory by the Board of Trustees it was gratefully recognized that the College was "mainly indebted for its existence to his generous and laborious efforts," and that in the days of its "deepest adversity" it had been "sustained by his unwearied and persevering assiduity more than by any other means." It was added: "No discouragement could ever damp his zeal, no opposition could allay his ardor for its prosperity." Resolutions of respect for his memory were adopted and the President of the College was requested to deliver an obituary discourse in honor of his life, character, and services.

President Chapin resigned in 1841, after an administration of thirteen years, during which the College gradually escaped from the burdens of distrust and debt, under which it was staggering when he accepted the Presidency.

In 1843, the Rev. Joel S. Bacon, D. D., became President. At this time the College was freed from debt, though it had no endowment. Under President Bacon the collection of a permanent endowment was commenced, and efforts to increase that endowment have been continued during the succeeding administrations. Dr. Bacon having resigned the Presidency in 1854, the Rev. Dr. Binney, a returned missionary from Burma was chosen to succeed him. He engaged to hold the office for only a brief term, and gave place in 1859 to the Rev. Geo. W. Samson, D. D., whose difficult task it was, with the aid of his colleagues, to carry the institution through the fires of the civil war.

At the outbreak of the war the number of students in attendance was greater than at any previous period, but most of them soon left, and shortly afterward the College buildings were occupied by the Government for hospital purposes. The College exercises, however, were not suspended, and the few students who continued in attendance received able instruction in the class rooms.

It was provided in the charter, granted in 1821, that the College should be under the management of a number of Trustees, "not exceeding thirty-one, to be elected triennially by the contributors to the College, qualified to vote, in such manner and under such limitations and restrictions as may be provided by the ordinances of the College."

This created a governing body liable to periodical change in its entire constitution.

It should be added that this supplemental act was passed by Congress in pursuance of a request from the Board of Trustees and Overseers.

On September 10, 1877, Prof. William Ruggles, LL. D.,

for fifty-five years a faithful and honored professor of the College and University, died at Schooley's Mountain, N. J. In announcing his death to the Trustees, President Welling said : "The extraordinary length of his service in connection with the College the conscientiousness with which he discharged lot and are separated from the main building by a heavy brick wall. Access to the laboratories is obtained by a spacious stone staircase, built around the main ventilating shaft, and encased by brick walls to make it proof against fire. Heavy brick partitions and iron beams running through the whole building render each tier of rooms secure from communication in case fire should occur in any part of the structure. The building is heated throughout by steam and by a combination of both direct and indirect radiation. The ventilation is effected by a general system dependent on two large shafts and by a special system of flues connecting with these shafts, or with chimneys, and reaching to every room occupied for purposes of instruction.

The contributors to the building and endowment funds of the University have been many, but the contributions in most cases, have been small in amount. Among the earliest friends of the College to aid it in its need, was John Quincy Adams, who loaned it $18,000, part of which debt he remitted. From 1835 to 1861, John Withers of Va., made frequent gifts to cancel debts, to make repairs to buildings, and for general purposes, amounting in the aggregate to nearly $70,000.

In 1865 William W. Corcoran presented to the College a building for the Medical School, valued at $30,000. In 1872 he offered an estate near the city on condition that $100,000 additional should be raised for a permanent endowment. The required sum was obtained, and, with Mr. Corcoran's gifts, constitutes the present endowment. The estate was sold in 1885 and the University realized $85,000 from it. In 1883 Mr. Corcoran gave $30,000 toward the cost of the new University building, and in 1886 he added $25,000 to the endowment fund.

In 1873 Mrs. Elizabeth J. Stone, of Washington, made a gift of valuable works of art, now in the Museum of the University.

The Medical Department, as we have seen, was established in 1821, and Thomas Sewall, M. D. and James M. Staughton, M. D. were chosen as the first Professors. But not until March 30, 1825 was the school formally opened. The first course of lectures lasted three months and was attended by 22 students. The second course, with an enlarged Faculty, was delivered before an increased number of students, and at the conclusion of this term, in March, 1826, the first Commencement was held and the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon six graduates. The school was very successful for several years, even continuing its exercises during 1827-'8 when the College was closed, but from 1834 to 1839, for causes not now clearly known, the regular lectures were suspended, though the Professors gave instruction to private classes. In 1839 the Faculty was reorganized, and regular classes were again formed.

The sessions of the School were held in a building at the corner of Tenth and E streets until 1844, when Congress granted the Faculty permission to use a building in Judiciary Square which had been fitted up for an Insane Asylum, but was found unsuited for that purpose. The building was prepared for the use of the School and for an infirmary, and was known as the Washington Infirmary. In 1853 the building was remodelled and enlarged and the hospital and infirmary facilities were greatly improved. At the outbreak of the war the U. S. Government resumed possession of the building, and the Medical College occupied temporary quarters in different places until 1866. In that year Mr. W. W. Corcoran generously presented the College with the building on H street which has since been used by the Medical School. In 1887 $10,000 was spent in enlarging the building and adding to the apparatus, and the rapidly increasing number of students is even now demanding further enlargement.

In April, 1847, the Medical College, by authority of the Board of Trustees, assumed the title of "The National Medical College, Medical Department of the Columbian College, in the District of Columbia."

The Medical Department has had great influence upon the Medical Profession in the District of Columbia, upon the medical institutions, upon charitable institutions and upon the community at large. It has been foremost in the establishment of Medical Societies in the District ; it has seen a rival institution spring up at its side, and has often felt a mother's pride in the Professors recruited from the ranks of its alumni to maintain this rivalry ; it has furnished distinguished graduates to fill Professorships in some of the best Colleges in the land ; it was largely instrumental in founding the National College of Pharmacy. During most of its history it has had a free dispensary service at the College, and its Professors and alumni have ever been foremost in establishing hospitals.

Providence Hospital is the direct outcome of the abandonment of the Infirmary. The Children's Hospital and Garfield Hospital both owe their existence largely to the exertions of the members of the Columbian Faculty.

The Law School, as organized in 1826, was discontinued on account of the embarrassments of 1827, and was not re-established until 1865. In that year a building on Fifth street, now known as the Columbian Law Building and used to-day for office purposes, was fitted up for the purposes of a Law School. The success of the School was immediate and marked, and with its constantly enlarged faculty as well as by reason of its broadening curriculum it attracts each year an increasing number of students from all parts of the country. Since 1884 it has occupied a lecture hall especially designed for it in the new University Building. Other rooms in the building are assigned to the various "quiz clubs" and study classes which are formed among the students.

It is the oldest Law School in Washington, even if its founding be dated from 1865, and it was the first School in the country to establish a Graduate course leading to the degree of Master of Laws. This School of graduate studies in law is called the School of Practice, and furnishes an invaluable training in legal procedure and pleadings.

The Law School has its alumni in every State and Territory of the Union as also in foreign lands. It carries to-day on its alumni roll the names of 1,345 graduates who have received the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and of 318 graduates who have received the degree of Master of Laws. Some of these alumni have filled, and are still filling, stations of high trust and honor in the administration of the Government at Washington, in the halls of Congress, and in the foreign service of the country. Many have achieved distinction on the bench of the State Judiciary, while a countless number have achieved, and are still achieving, distinction at the bar. Some have become Professors of Law, and are paying in this way the debt due to their profession and to their Alma Mater. For this splendid record the University has to thank its peerless Law Faculty and the felicity of its position at the National Capital.

The authorities of the University hope at an early day to establish in connection with the Law Department a "School of Comparative Jurisprudence," in which the law of the world shall be taught as an historical evolution and as a philosophy, for the nurture of graduate studies in law, and for the promotion of juridical science and statesmanship.

The Scientific School was established in 1884, and though the time has been too short to give it much of a history, it has been very successful this far. It is organized on a broad basis and though it has not as yet been able to give instructions in many branches, owing to its want of adequate endowments, it provides a well assorted range of studies which lead to technical proficiency in the arts and sciences most conducive to modern life.

The Dental School, the youngest professional school of the University, was established in 1887. It has a most efficient and learned faculty who maintain a high standard, and the school is rapidly growing in favor among students.

The Preparatory School was established early in the history of the College. At first it was meant to be a fitting school for college, with a required course of study, but afterwards a Scientific course and a High School course were established, and it now prepares for college, for the Scientific School, for the Military or Naval Academy, or for business. Its sessions are held in a building designed with special reference to its needs and erected in 1883. The number of its students is limited to 100, and it is seldom that there are many vacancies.

The Library of the University has been slowly accumulating since 1821, and contains many valuable works. In recent years the Alumni have contributed a number of useful books, and have established and maintained a reading-room, supplied with a large number of magazines, reviews, and other periodicals. The Trustees have for some years made annual appropriations which have been mainly expended for Law books, and the Law Library now contains an exceedingly valuable set of U. S. Reports, State Reports, English Common Law Reports and other volumes of daily use to the student and the practising lawyer.

The first Alumni Association of the Columbian College was formed July 14, 1847, at a meeting of twenty-seven graduates of the College. Only those who had received the degree of Bachelor of Arts could become active members of this Association. Annual meetings were held until 1874, when, through lessening interest, the organization practically ceased to exist.

In 1886 an attempt was made to reorganize the Association, and a meeting was held at which a constitution was adopted and officers were elected. Afterwards it was thought best to enlarge the scope and membership, and a meeting of graduates of all departments of the University was called. At this meeting, held February 28, 1887, the present association was organized. Regular meetings have been held each year for the transaction of business and the consideration of plans for aiding the University; and a social reunion and banquet is participated in each spring by a large number of members.

The preceding pages summarize the formal history of the College, and its successor, the University. But a better history than is here found can be read in the accounts of what has been done in every walk of life by those who have graduated from the College and the professional schools. And to the records of honorable standing which are found on the following pages should be added, if a true estimate of what the institution has done is to be formed, those other records, which cannot at this time be here given, of former students who went into active life before they could complete the full course required for a degree.

The past yields to the present; the present looks to the future. A College, struggling for existence, yet yearly providing instruction and training that made that existence a widening influence for good, has developed into a University, with the mother College surrounded by four professional schools, and with an aggregate attendance during the past session of seven hundred and fifty-five students.

The possibilities and the plans of this growing University can be best expressed in the language of President Welling. From a pamphlet published by him in 1889 the following paragraphs are here appended as being of interest to every alumnus and every friend of the University:

WHAT THE UNIVERSITY NOW IS.

“In 1873 the Columbian College, already an embryo university in the practical range and compass of its studies and teachings, received a formal university charter at the hands of Congress. It has to-day its College, its Medical School, its School of Dentistry, its School of Law, and its School of Science.

[The attendance during the session of 1890-'91 was:—In the Preparatory School, 95 ; in the Columbian College, 66 ; in the Corcoran Scientific School, 110 ; in the Medical School, 155 ; in the school of Dentistry, 17 ; in the Law School, 312 ; an aggregate of 755.]

"And all this University work is done on the basis of a small and inadequate endowment of less than $250,000. Our buildings, newly constructed and situated in the most eligible part of Washington (within a stone's throw of the Presidential mansion), are worth half a million of dollars.

"The reason why the Columbian University has been able to achieve such large results, on a capital so small, is not far to seek. It is to be found in the felicity of its situation, and in the intellectual character of its social environment. Washington is to-day a great educational centre, not simply because it is a great political centre, and not simply because it has become since the civil war a brilliant social centre, but because it has become the great scientific centre of the whole country, and is the favorite meeting place of learned societies, many of which gather in Washington from all quarters of the land for an annual exchange of discussions and ideas. When Professor John Tyndall was delivering in Washington, some years ago, his course of popular lectures on light, he remarked to me that he knew of no city in Europe which could gather a congregation of scientific workers and original investigators so large as that which he then met in "The Philosophical Society" of Washington, under the presidency of Joseph Henry. This Society, the oldest of its kind in Washington, is only one of the scientific bodies which surround that parent organization at the present time. For here we have the Anthropological Society, the Biological Society, the Chemical Society, the Botanical Society, the Mathematical Section of the Philosophical Society the National Geographic Society, etc., etc.—together comprising a body of 600 learned men connected with the different departments of scientific work conducted under the patronage of the National Government. It is because this work is conducted under the auspices of the Government that these departments must have their central seats and their foremost workers in the city of Washington. These foremost workers are connected, according to their respective specialties, with the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum, the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Ethnology, the Patent Office, the Army Medical Museum, the Naval Museum of Hygiene, the Weather Bureau, the Coast Survey, the Bureau of Hydrography, the National Observatory, the Agricultural Department, the Botanical Garden, the Department of Education, etc., etc. The National Academy of Sciences holds its annual meetings here. The American Historical Association holds its annual meetings here and deposits its collections in the Smithsonian Institution. The Congress which adjourned on the 4th of March (1889) has just made provision for the establishment of a Zoölogical Garden under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution—so that the living study of zoölogy will now be brought to our doors.

A GREAT EDUCATIONAL PLANT.

“It remains to say that all these great centres of scientific study and activity are surmounted, sustained and replenished by the best and largest collection of books in the whole country. This collection consists not only of the library of Congress, the largest single collection in the land, but it is also supplemented by important special libraries connected with each of the great departments of the general Government, and with each of the several bureaus among which the scientific work of the Government is here distributed. Every branch of human knowledge has a literary deposit in Washington. For instance, under the head of science alone, the Smithsonian Institution has a deposit reckoned by more than 250,000 titles in the alcoves of the library of Congress. In law the same library comprises an invaluable collection of more than 50,000 volumes, covering the jurisprudence of the civilized world. We thus have in the city of Washington more than a million of volumes, selected by experts in the several departments of knowledge, and so housed and administered in close juxtaposition that they are easily accessible to students, whether for reference, for comparative research, or for careful reading; and all this without money and without price on the part of the University or its pupils. How large a saving of University funds may be effected under this head in Washington can be inferred when I recall the fact that the Congress of the United States has just made an appropriation of $6,000,000 for the proper preservation of the literary treasures of the Government in a National Library Building to be erected almost under the eaves of the National Capitol. That library will be to all intents and purposes an adjunct of the Columbian University in the conduct of its educational operations—so soon as the University shall have endowments, under which to appoint the professors and lecturers who can be teachers and guides in the wise use of these accumulated treasures in law, science, history, politics, public economy, literature and theology.

“In the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the most richly endowed institution of its kind in the country (it has a free endowment of $1,000,000), provision is also made among us for the study of the fine arts. Free instruction in drawing and painting is given in the art school of this gallery.

“To show how all these appliances may be made directly tributary to university studies with a vast saving of expense on the score of university administration, let me take one or two illustrative examples—say, the National Museum, and the Chemical Bureaus of Washington.

“The National Museum has twenty-two distinct scientific departments under its jurisdiction: The departments of comparative anatomy, of mammals, of birds, of reptiles, of fishes, of mollusks, of insects, of marine invertebrates, of plants, of fossil vertebrates, of paleozoic fossil invertebrates, of mesozoic fossil invertebrates, of cenozoic fossil invertebrates, of fossil plants, of geology and petrology, of mineralogy, of metallurgy and mining, of prehistoric archæology, of ethnology, of oriental antiquities, of American aboriginal pottery, of arts and industries, comprising under these last-named heads numismatics, graphic arts, foods, textiles, fisheries, historical relics, materia medica, naval architecture, history of transportation, etc., etc., etc.

“Each of these departments is placed under a curator, and is provided with the necessary appliances for original research; and these appliances are yearly increasing in completeness and efficiency. In addition to these special appliances each curator has his laboratory with its necessary apparatus, his working library, and his study-series of specimens for use in original investigation. In connection with his sectional library each curator has access to the central library of the museum, now containing over 20,000 volumes, as also to the library of Congress. These scientific laboratories are always open to students and investigators who come either to observe methods of work or to pursue researches of their own with the aid of these appliances. It should be added, as bearing directly on the problem of university education, that each of these departmental libraries and laboratories is of the kind which a university would require if it has a specialist of its own engaged in a minute subdivision of science corresponding to that of the museum. Some of these laboratories, notably those of zoology, geology, and botany, have a fuller outfit than those of any American university, while others of these laboratories have no analogues at all in the best equipped of our educational institutions. Professor Otis T. Mason, Ph. D., so honorably known to the scientific world as one of the learned curators of the National Museum, can authenticate all that I have said concerning the possible relations which this great scientific workshop is actually bearing, and can be made to bear, to the cause of university education.

THE SEVEN CHEMICAL CENTRES.

“Let us now turn to consider, for a moment, the opportunities which Washington offers for the study of chemical science—that science which to-day is transforming in so many aspects the private and the public economy of the world. There are at least seven centres of chemical activity conducted under the auspices of the Government at the National Capital. First, there is the chemical laboratory of the United States Geological Survey, in which six chemists and two physicists are employed. Analyses are here made of rocks, minerals, ores, clays, etc., etc., collected from all parts of the country by the field parties of the survey, acting under the conduct of the Hon. John W. Powell, the learned director of the survey, who is, I may add, one of the trustees of the Columbian University. Researches pertinent to chemical geology are also pursued in this laboratory, with a view to the extension of abstract science. Secondly, there is the laboratory of the Department of Agriculture, in which from six to eight chemists are engaged upon problems relative to soils, fertilizers, the manufacture of sugar, the chemistry of food products, the detection of adulterants, etc., etc. The chemical work is done here in a broadly scientific spirit, by able men armed with an excellent equipment. Thirdly, the surgeon-general of the army maintains a laboratory in which drugs are analyzed previous to their purchase. Fourthly, the Museum of Hygiene, under the control of the surgeon-general of the navy, conducts investigations in prophylaxis, disinfectants, bacteriology, etc. A fifth laboratory is connected with the Bureau of the Mint. The sixth laboratory is under the direction of the Internal Revenue Bureau for reasons connected with the national excise system of taxation, while the seventh of these great governmental laboratories is connected with the United States Patent Office. Patents are annually issued in large numbers bearing on chemical industries, and it is under the United States examiners in chemistry that the practical scientific activity and inventive industry of the country (where it bears on chemistry) are brought to a focus in the Patent Office.

“The exposition above given, with regard to the educational facilities offered by the National Museum and by the Chemical Bureaus of Washington, might, as I have hinted, be extended with like detail to other departments of scientific work here conducted by the Government. But such an exposition would confuse the reader by its prolixity. Suffice it to say, that the Government of the United States makes an annual appropriation of nearly three millions of dollars for the support of scientific work which, in its several departments, has its headquarters in Washington. This is not a rough guess, but an estimate which has been accurately derived from the "Digest of Appropriations" made by the Treasury Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889. A University founded here might immediately profit by the fruits of this vast expenditure.

HOW AVAILABLE TO THE UNIVERSITY.

"But, it may be said, what relation has all this affluence of scientific apparatus to the special behoof of a great University in Washington? I answer, much every way. A very large part of the sum required for the establishment of a University at Cambridge, at New Haven, and at Princeton, must needs be expended for what is technically called "the educational plant"—buildings, books, costly apparatus, specimens, collections in zoölogy, botany, archæology, etc., etc. And then large sums must be annually expended for the preservation and administration of these buildings and of these illustrative materials. The necessary expenditures of this kind are reduced to a minimum at Washington, for here the choicest materials of education already exist under the custody of the Government, and are offered ready made to the hands of the University which is able to wield them in its service. Nor is this all. In connection with these scientific departments may be found very many of the foremost men of science in our country, and (in certain specialties) in the whole world. I need but call the names of Newcomb, of Major Powell, of Asaph Hall, of Langley, of G. Brown Goode, of Dr. John S. Billings, and of many others to set this fact in a clear light. Scientific experts in the Government service are already connected with the Columbian University—men of highest science, like Godding, Mason, Gill, Gore, Abbe, Winlock, Knowlton, Prentiss, Yeates, Fletcher, Gray, and others.

"It is because of the felicity of our position at this seat of American law and justice that the Columbian University is able to enlist, in the service of its law school, the most eminent teachers—Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, assistant attorneys-general, judges of the Supreme Court of the District, and illustrious jurisconsults like Dr. Francis Wharton, the late Solicitor of the Department of State, whose recent death the University is called to mourn in common with the friends of religion and jurisprudence throughout the land. It is because of our close proximity to the Army Medical Museum that we can profit by its peerless library and pathological collections, as well as by its learned collaborators, like Dr. Gray, the demonstrator of normal histology in the medical school of our University. The whole theory of medicine can here be taught with the richest and widest illustrative material, and the largest collection of medical books in the country. And these distinguished teachers in jurisprudence, in medicine, and in science, can afford to give their services to a Washington university at a rate of compensation which is reckoned by hundreds of dollars, where elsewhere it would be reckoned by thousands, because they draw the main part of their livelihood from their salaries as Government officers.

ECONOMY OF UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION.

"It is in this way that one dollar will accomplish in Washington, for educational purposes, the work of many dollars applied to similar objects at university seats which lack the advantages above specified. "The educational plant" here offered for the highest ends of the highest university could not be commanded elsewhere without an outlay ranging, according to the judgment of wisest men, from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars. In some departments, the educational materials of Washington could not be commanded by money at all. And hence it is that, as the least possible expenditure is here required for the indispensable tools and appliances of university education, the largest possible sum can be directly utilized in employment of professors, teachers, and lecturers in every branch of learning, and the largest possible sum can be applied to the encouragement of worthy pupils by the establishment of scholarships, fellowships, etc.

"With such a vantage ground already occupied by the Columbian University, and in some small measures already bearing fruit, it is easy to see the greater things it might achieve if only its endowments were made in some degree commensurate with its educational opportunities and the nationality of its position.

THE NEW EXTENSIONS REQUIRED.

"The University has reached a stage in its growth and development where it seems to call for three things: First, for a strengthening of all its undergraduate courses of study and of its existing professional schools; Secondly, for additions to its courses of professional study, and Thirdly, for structural changes reaching through its whole organism, in virtue of which advanced and graduate courses of study shall be provided, so far as practicable, in every department of knowledge embraced in the scheme and scope of the University's teachings.

"In connection with our college we ought to have learned men who shall not be exclusively occupied with the recitation drill of the class-room, and who shall have leisure for the prosecution of original research in language and science. 'We have not fully learned,' says President Patton, of Princeton College, 'the difference between a professor and a pedagogue, and that while the one may hear lessons the other should inspire with the thirst for knowledge and speak with authority. But are we coming to this position. We are finding that the professor who has ceased to learn is unable to teach.'

"In connection with our School of Science we ought to have at the end of each professional curriculum at least one or two educators endowed with the spirit of original investigation, and keeping abreast with the progress of discovery in some high specialty. The presence of one such teacher is an inspiration—an inspiration alike to the teachers and pupils who come in contact with him.

"In our Medical School we ought to be able to place ourselves in more intimate relations with the Army Medical Museum and the Navy Bureau of Hygiene by calling to our aid the eminent medical scholars and experts connected with these two departments. Some of these scholars and experts not only stand at the head of the medical profession in point of learning, but are actively conducting original researches for the advancement of medical science. Professor John Tyndall, of London, has expressed the opinion that it is in the science of medicine that the greatest discoveries are to be made in the near future for the alleviation of disease and the promotion of human well-being. The art of medicine depends for its efficacy on the science of medicine, and in no part of the country are the facilities and means for the increase of medical science so abundantly supplied as in Washington. Moreover, at the Government Hospital for the Insane, in Washington, with its patients numbering more than a thousand (the number was 1361 at the date of the last annual report), important work in the pathological study of insanity, and its physical conditions is conducted on lines of original investigation by a trained expert, who preserves and publishes the results of his microscopic analyses in the form of photographic records and descriptive annotation. Dr. W. W. Godding, the accomplished Superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, is already a lecturer in the Medical School of the University, and the President of the University has been for many years one of the Visitors appointed by the President of the United States to supervise the operations of this institution, and is thus in a position to become intimately acquainted with the opportunities it offers for the higher medical education.

"In our School of Law the undergraduate course of two years is already supplemented with a graduate course of one year, called the "Course in Practice," in which the student is trained to the art of practically applying the principles of law to the actual proceedings of courts of justice in the United States.

The Columbian University was the first to establish such a graduate course in connection with its Law School, but similar courses have since been created in other leading schools. The next step in the order of development in our Law School is that we should have a graduate course of legal and scientific studies culminating in the history and philosophy of universal jurisprudence. Such a course, even if attended by only a few pupils, would strike a quickening influence through all the studies of the courses lying below it. The University of Leyden is perhaps best known to-day as having been the nursing mother of Grotius, the founder of international law, though it was also the home of Descartes, Scaliger, Boerhaave, and of our own John Quincy Adams. The lectures of Savigny marked an epoch in the history of German jurisprudence, as the lectures of Sir Henry Sumner Maine at Oxford have unsealed the fountains of a new and broader exegesis for the scientific interpretation of English and American law at the present day. The science of the world thrives more and more on the comparative study of like phenomena. Indeed, so fruitful is the comparative method of research in its application to the phenomena of society that Freeman, the English historian, has not scrupled to say that this method stands second only to the Revival of Learning in the impetus it has given to all intellectual progress. It is by this method that analogical reasoning, with its possible errors resulting from mistaken appearances, is converted into homological reasoning, with its demonstrative proofs drawn from the deeper relations of things. The student of law who has saturated his mind with knowledge drawn from the institutes of primitive civilization; who knows the stages by which the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian codes paved the way for the compilations of Justinian; who knows the place which the Capitularies of Charlemagne hold in the evolution of European jurisprudence, and who, by a comparative study of the Roman civil law and of the English common law, can trace the grounds of the jurisprudence common to both, would enter upon the practice of his profession with a knowledge of its principles rooted in history and philosophy. Prof. Henry E. Davis, LL. M., the accomplished Lecturer on the History of English and American Law in our Law School, is already pushing inquiry beyond the boundaries of Sir Henry Maine, as knowledge grows concerning the customary law of primeval man, and at the same time he keeps his chair abreast with those original and profound investigations by which Scrutton and Maitland, in England, are giving new significance to Bracton, and to the fountains of English Law in general. In all this we are but returning to a well-known maxim of Lord Coke—melius est petere fontes quam sectari rivulos.

“The Columbian University will never reach the height of its mission until it shall comprise in its university system a School of Politics and of Public Economy. For such a school its situation in the National Capital is pre-eminently favorable. Steps have been taken again and again in this direction, but no progress has yet been made for the want of an adequate endowment on which to found the school. Eminent statesmen and eminent scholars in political economy have pledged their cooperation in connection with such a school. An outline sketch of the studies to be pursued in it was submitted by the President of the University to the authorities of the institution in the year 1881.

“It is because I believe that the next great problems of our social and political order are to be fought out on the field of economics that I advocate the establishment of a School of Politics and of Public Economy in connection with the Columbian University. In support of this prognostication, I need but point to the political agitations of the present hour. The “burning questions” of the day in all civilized States are pre-eminently economic and societary. These questions need to be discussed in the light of history, science, philosophy, and Christianity, that they may be settled on the sure foundations of truth and righteousness. “Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times.” And where can the wisdom and knowledge required for the right solution of these great problems in applied economics be more intelligently sifted or more effectually promulgated than in the lecture halls of a great university at the seat of the National Government?

“The learning of the world at the present day has ceased to be cloistral, and walks abroad in the market-place, that the discoveries of science may “come home to men’s business and bosoms.” It is a fine phrase of Thucydides, that “discussion is the teacher of measures,” and the scientific discussions of a university, if conducted by men of foremost intelligence with academic serenity, can never be brought too near to the legislative halls of our Congress.

“While the city of Washington, for reasons already given, offers unrivalled facilities for the cultivation of the physical sciences, I do not propose that the Columbian University shall be exclusively addicted to studies which move in number, matter, space and motion. I wish to see it the seat also of highest studies in humanities, in linguistics, in pedagogics, in philosophy and in theology. In the humanities, because the high literature of the world is the artistic expression of the best minds of the human race in all ages, and as such, needs to be preserved in our university cultures “on purpose to a life beyond life,” as Milton phrases it. In linguistics, because the scientific study of human speech in Egyptology, in the cuneiform records, in the Shemitic dialects, in the classical tongues of Greece and Rome, and in modern tongues of all kinds, is placing in our hands the keys of sound biblical criticism as well as the essential propædæutic to polemical divinity and philological science. In pedagogics, because we already have in the Department of Education in Washington (with its collection of books, nearly 20,000 in number, devoted to the history, science and art of education), a vast repository from which to draw useful materials for lecture-courses on that art of teaching which, more than printing, is really "the art preservative of all arts." In philosophy, because it is not enough that the studies of a university should aim at professional dexterity; they should aim to lay the foundations of the broadest and deepest culture even in the case of those who particularly devote themselves to some specialized study or profession.

FACTS IN CONNECTION WITH FIGURES.

"Bringing the foregoing suggestions to the focus of a more precise definition, I may say that—

"The Columbian College (the collegiate department of the University) needs an additional endowment of at least $200,000 for the establishment of new professorships and lectureships in the modern languages, in the physical sciences and in political science.

"The Corcoran Scientific School, except in the department of chemistry, is almost totally destitute of the necessary appliances for class-room instruction in science. Five years ago the Trustees of the University issued an urgent appeal for $60,000, to be expended under this head. The professors in this school are now giving their services without any stipend save that which results from an equitable division among them of the tuition fees. A free endowment of $200,000 would yield an income of $10,000, and this income if applied to the purposes of this school would give to it a very respectable efficiency, it being premised that the expense of conducting such a school in Washington is greatly less than in other cities not so favorably situated in the matter of eminent teachers and illustrative materials.

"The Medical School depends in like manner upon the annual receipts derived from tuition fees, and is practically supported by the munificence of its learned faculty, who give their services to the University at a rate of compensation widely at variance with the divine rule that "the laborer is worthy of his hire." An annual income from $200,000 would only partially repair these deficits of salary, while still leaving something for the extension of medical lecture-courses and the improvement of the Dental School.

“Our Law School, as at present established, has no endowment whatsoever. It depends entirely upon the receipts from tuition fees for the salaries of its professors and for the means of defraying the expenses incident to its administration. The annual income from an endowment of $100,000 would give new supports to the school, and would pave the way for the establishment of the fourth-year's course in universal jurisprudence.

“To found the School of Politics and of Public Economy a free endowment of $300,000, with an annual income of $15,000, would suffice. This school ought to have at least two permanent professors of the first rank in point of learning and distinction. The services of such men could not be secured at a rate of compensation less than $5,000 per annum for the salary of each. The residue of the annual income should be applied to the employment of resident and extraordinary lecturers—for whom Washington offers an inviting field.

HIGH GRADUATE COURSES.

“For the establishment of high graduate courses of study in connection with each department of the University there is no limit to the endowment that could be wisely and effectively used in Washington. The annual income from ten thousand dollars would not be too little to give some impulse to the University in this right direction, and the annual income from several millions of dollars would not be too much to exhaust the possibilities of Washington as an educational centre. Working with reference to the proximate future, the authorities of the University could perhaps best use the income from a single million in providing the additions and structural changes above indicated—the structural changes looking in the direction of highest studies.”

Since the publication of this pamphlet, from which the foregoing extracts are taken, President Welling has projected a “School of Comparative Jurisprudence” as an annex to the Law School, and the scheme of its studies, after being approved by eminent jurists and teachers in Europe as well as in the United States, has been formally approved by the governing body of the University, and now only awaits an endowment of $100,000 as the foundation of its establishment. It is hoped that some friend of learning will see and seize the opportunity thus offered for the promotion of juridical learning in the proper sense of that term.

THE FACULTIES.

PRESIDENTS.

THE REV. WILLIAM STAUGHTON, D. D.

Professor of General History, Belles-Lettres and Moral Philosophy: and of Divinity and Sacred Rhetoric.

He was born at Coventry, England, January 4, 1770, and died at Washington, D. C., December 12, 1829. He graduated at Bristol Theological College in 1792, and shortly afterward came to this country. He preached for a year-and-a-half at Georgetown, S. C., and then removed to New York City, and later to Bordentown, N. J., where he was pastor of the Baptist Church and principal of the seminary. He was pastor at Burlington, N. J., from 1797 to 1805, when he accepted a call to the First Baptist Church, at Philadelphia, where he remained until 1811, when he joined with many members of the First Church in forming the Sansom Street Church, of which he was pastor until 1822, when he resigned to enter upon the duties of President to which office he had been elected in 1821. He resigned from the College in 1827, and in 1829 was elected President of Georgetown College, Ky., but died before assuming office.

He was considered the most eloquent preacher in his denomination; he was an earnest worker in educational lines, being engaged in teaching most of his life; and he was a leader in missionary work. He received the degree of D. D. from Princeton in 1801. He published a volume of poems when but a youth, and a few sermons and discourses.

THE REV. STEPHEN CHAPIN, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy, and Belles-Lettres.

He was born in Milford, Mass., Nov. 4, 1778, and died Oct. 1, 1845. He graduated from Harvard in 1804, and then studied theology under Rev. Nathaniel Emmons, of Franklin Mass. He entered the Congregational ministry and served as pastor at Hillsborough, N. H., from 1805 to 1808, and at Mount Vernon, N. H., from 1809 to 1818. Having changed his views on the mode and subjects of baptism, he entered the Baptist ministry, and in 1819 was ordained pastor of the church at North Yarmouth, Me. In 1822 he accepted the professorship of theology in Waterville College (now Colby University), and remained there until 1828, when he became President of the Columbian College. This position he retained until 1841, when failing health compelled him to resign. He was a man of culture and learning, and won the regard of all with whom he associated. In Washington he was intimate with the leading statesmen and scholars of his day. His published works include but a few sermons, addresses and essays.

THE REV. JOEL SMITH BACON, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., Sept. 3, 1802, and died Nov. 9, 1869 at Richmond, Va. He studied at Homer Academy and Hamilton College, graduating from the latter in 1826, with the highest honors. He taught in Virginia for a year, and was in charge of a classical school at Princeton for a year, and in 1829 entered the Theological Seminary at Newton, Mass. In 1830 he was elected president of Georgetown College, Ky., but held the office only until 1833 when he became Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Hamilton College, N. Y. At his request, shortly after entering upon his duties, he was transferred to the chair of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy which was erected especially for him. The necessity of settling the estate of his father-in-law who died in 1837, compelled him to resign and remove to Salem, Mass., and while living there he was for two years pastor of the church at Lynn. In 1843 he became President of the Columbian College, and held the office until 1854. From 1855 to 1866 he was engaged in female education in the South, and in 1866 he accepted an appointment from the American and Foreign Bible Society to distribute Bibles among the colored people, and though seemingly a lowly work he enjoyed it with his whole heart, and continued this labor until his death.

"He was a true man of pure and lofty sentiments, with broad and generous sympathies, with kindly affections, and singularly free from all partisan prejudices and bitter jealousies."

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born at Boston, Mass., Dec. 1, 1807, and died at sea Nov. 26, 1877, while returning to Burma. He was educated at Yale and Newton Theological Seminary, and was ordained in 1832. He settled at Savannah, Ga., but in 1843 he went to India to engage in missionary work among the Karens. He established in 1845 the Karen Seminary for the training of native ministers, but after some years he returned to America, owing to the precarious health of Mrs. Binney. He was engaged for a time as pastor at Elmira, N. Y. and Augusta, Ga., and in 1855 accepted the Presidency. He resigned in 1858 to resume his work among the Karens, where he labored with great success until 1875 when failing health caused him to take a trip to America. On his return, in 1877, he died at sea and was buried in the Indian Ocean.

THE REV. GEORGE WHITEFIELD SAMSON, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born at Harvard, Mass., Sept. 29, 1819. He studied under Rev. Chas. Train and Principal Silas Bailey, of the Worcester Manual Labor School, and graduated from Brown University in 1839. For a year he was Assistant Principal of the Worcester Manual Labor School, and in 1840 entered the Newton Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1843. In the same year he became Pastor of the E Street Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., where he had preached during his seminary course. For the two years from 1850 to 1852, he was Pastor at Jamaica

Plains, Mass., and then returned to the E Street Church, where he remained until he became President of the College in 1859. It was his difficult task to have the direction of the College affairs during the trying times of the war, but, with the aid of his colleagues, he kept the College open, and was even planning further extension of its work. In 1862, upon his recommendation, a committee from the Trustees was appointed to consider the re-establishment of the Law School; and largely through the exertions of President Samson, a building was purchased and the School was opened in 1865. After the war, large sums were expended in improvements of the buildings and grounds of the College. He resigned from the College in 1871, and accepted the Presidency of Rutgers Female College, New York City. This office he resigned in 1875, but resumed it in 1886. In addition to his college work he has been engaged in preaching and training young men for evangelistic labors. He has been a constant contributor to the periodical press, and has published a number of volumes. In 1852 appeared "To Daimonion, or the Spiritual Medium," issued, in 1860, with a supplement as "Spiritualism Tested," and in 1868, as "Physical Media in Spiritual Manifestations." Other works are: "Outlines of the History of Ethics," 1860; "Elements of Art Criticism," 1867; "The Atonement," 1878; "Divine Law as to Wines," 1880; "English Revisers' Greek Text shown to be Unauthorized," 1882; "Guide to Self-Education," 1886; "Guide to Bible Interpretation," 1887; and "Idols of Fashion and Culture," 1888.

Elected 1871.

Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy and Lecturer on History in the College.

Professor of Public and Private International Law in the Law School.

He was born July 14, 1825, at Trenton, N. J. He prepared for college at the Trenton Academy, and entered Princeton, from which he graduated in 1844. He was a private tutor in Virginia for two years, and then began the study of law. In 1848 he became associate principal of the New York Collegiate School, but after a short time he accepted the position of Literary Editor of the National Intelligencer at Washington. He became Associate Editor of that journal in 1856 and was charged with its chief conduct until 1865 when failing health, induced by his arduous labors, compelled him to resign.

As editor of the Intelligencer during the trying period of the war, he occupied a place of singular difficulty and of great importance and influence. The discussions in the journal during this period often took the form of elaborate papers on questions of constitutional or international law, and exercised an acknowledged influence on public opinion.

After his resignation from the Intelligencer, he spent a year of travel and study in Europe. Returning to Washington, he resumed the duties of Clerk of the U. S. Court of Claims, to which office he had been appointed in 1863. In 1867 he became President of St. John's College, Md., and in 1870 he was called to the chair of Belles-Lettres in Princeton. In 1871 he was elected President of the Columbian College. Under his administration the name of the institution has been changed to the Columbian University, a permanent endowment fund has for the first time been raised, large and conveniently arranged buildings have been erected in the heart of Washington, the Law School has been greatly enlarged, the Scientific School and the Dental School have been established, the number of students has increased from 326 in 1871 to 755 in 1891, the number of the Faculty from twenty-five in 1871 to fifty-six in 1891, without counting more than once several Professors who teach in more than one department.

President Welling is connected with many literary, historical and scientific societies. He is the President of the Anthropological Society of Washington, is President of the Board of Trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery, is a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution and Chairman of its Executive Committee. He has written a great deal, but most of his published work, as yet, has appeared in the form of editorials and literary addresses, and of contributions to various periodicals. It is understood that he is now preparing for publication his Lectures on Literature at Princeton College and his Lectures on History at the Columbian University, and that he is engaged on a history of the Civil War in the United States, as regarded in its civil, political and juridical aspects.

THE FACULTIES.

PRESIDENTS.

THE REV. WILLIAM STAUGHTON, D. D.

Professor of General History, Belles-Lettres and Moral Philosophy: and of Divinity and Sacred Rhetoric.

He was born at Coventry, England, January 4, 1770, and died at Washington, D. C., December 12, 1829. He graduated at Bristol Theological College in 1792, and shortly afterward came to this country. He preached for a year-and-a-half at Georgetown, S. C., and then removed to New York City, and later to Bordentown, N. J., where he was pastor of the Baptist Church and principal of the seminary. He was pastor at Burlington, N. J., from 1797 to 1805, when he accepted a call to the First Baptist Church, at Philadelphia, where he remained until 1811, when he joined with many members of the First Church in forming the Sansom Street Church, of which he was pastor until 1822, when he resigned to enter upon the duties of President to which office he had been elected in 1821. He resigned from the College in 1827, and in 1829 was elected President of Georgetown College, Ky., but died before assuming office.

He was considered the most eloquent preacher in his denomination; he was an earnest worker in educational lines, being engaged in teaching most of his life; and he was a leader in missionary work. He received the degree of D. D. from Princeton in 1801. He published a volume of poems when but a youth, and a few sermons and discourses.

THE REV. STEPHEN CHAPIN, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy, and Belles-Lettres.

He was born in Milford, Mass., Nov. 4, 1778, and died Oct. 1, 1845. He graduated from Harvard in 1804, and then studied theology under Rev. Nathaniel Emmons, of Franklin Mass. He entered the Congregational ministry and served as pastor at Hillsborough, N. H., from 1805 to 1808, and at Mount Vernon, N. H., from 1809 to 1818. Having changed his views on the mode and subjects of baptism, he entered the Baptist ministry, and in 1819 was ordained pastor of the church at North Yarmouth, Me. In 1822 he accepted the professorship of theology in Waterville College (now Colby University), and remained there until 1828, when he became President of the Columbian College. This position he retained until 1841, when failing health compelled him to resign. He was a man of culture and learning, and won the regard of all with whom he associated. In Washington he was intimate with the leading statesmen and scholars of his day. His published works include but a few sermons, addresses and essays.

THE REV. JOEL SMITH BACON, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born in Cayuga Co., N. Y., Sept. 3, 1802, and died Nov. 9, 1869 at Richmond, Va. He studied at Homer Academy and Hamilton College, graduating from the latter in 1826, with the highest honors. He taught in Virginia for a year, and was in charge of a classical school at Princeton for a year, and in 1829 entered the Theological Seminary at Newton, Mass. In 1830 he was elected president of Georgetown College, Ky., but held the office only until 1833 when he became Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Hamilton College, N. Y. At his request, shortly after entering upon his duties, he was transferred to the chair of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy which was erected especially for him. The necessity of settling the estate of his father-in-law who died in 1837, compelled him to resign and remove to Salem, Mass., and while living there he was for two years pastor of the church at Lynn. In 1843 he became President of the Columbian College, and held the office until 1854. From 1855 to 1866 he was engaged in female education in the South, and in 1866 he accepted an appointment from the American and Foreign Bible Society to distribute Bibles among the colored people, and though seemingly a lowly work he enjoyed it with his whole heart, and continued this labor until his death.

"He was a true man of pure and lofty sentiments, with broad and generous sympathies, with kindly affections, and singularly free from all partisan prejudices and bitter jealousies."

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born at Boston, Mass., Dec. 1, 1807, and died at sea Nov. 26, 1877, while returning to Burma. He was educated at Yale and Newton Theological Seminary, and was ordained in 1832. He settled at Savannah, Ga., but in 1843 he went to India to engage in missionary work among the Karens. He established in 1845 the Karen Seminary for the training of native ministers, but after some years he returned to America, owing to the precarious health of Mrs. Binney. He was engaged for a time as pastor at Elmira, N. Y. and Augusta, Ga., and in 1855 accepted the Presidency. He resigned in 1858 to resume his work among the Karens, where he labored with great success until 1875 when failing health caused him to take a trip to America. On his return, in 1877, he died at sea and was buried in the Indian Ocean.

THE REV. GEORGE WHITEFIELD SAMSON, D. D.

Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy.

He was born at Harvard, Mass., Sept. 29, 1819. He studied under Rev. Chas. Train and Principal Silas Bailey, of the Worcester Manual Labor School, and graduated from Brown University in 1839. For a year he was Assistant Principal of the Worcester Manual Labor School, and in 1840 entered the Newton Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1843. In the same year he became Pastor of the E Street Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., where he had preached during his seminary course. For the two years from 1850 to 1852, he was Pastor at Jamaica

Plains, Mass., and then returned to the E. Street Church, where he remained until he became President of the College in 1859. It was his difficult task to have the direction of the College affairs during the trying times of the war, but, with the aid of his colleagues, he kept the College open, and was even planning further extension of its work. In 1862, upon his recommendation, a committee from the Trustees was appointed to consider the re-establishment of the Law School; and largely through the exertions of President Samson, a building was purchased and the School was opened in 1865. After the war, large sums were expended in improvements of the buildings and grounds of the College. He resigned from the College in 1871, and accepted the Presidency of Rutgers Female College, New York City. This office he resigned in 1875, but resumed it in 1886. In addition to his college work he has been engaged in preaching and training young men for evangelistic labors. He has been a constant contributor to the periodical press, and has published a number of volumes. In 1852 appeared "To Daimonion, or the Spiritual Medium," issued, in 1860, with a supplement as "Spiritualism Tested," and in 1868, as "Physical Media in Spiritual Manifestations." Other works are: "Outlines of the History of Ethics," 1860; "Elements of Art Criticism," 1867; "The Atonement," 1878; "Divine Law as to Wines," 1880; "English Revisers' Greek Text shown to be Unauthorized," 1882; "Guide to Self-Education," 1886; "Guide to Bible Interpretation," 1887; and "Idols of Fashion and Culture," 1888.

JAMES CLARKE WELLING, LL. D.

Elected 1871.

Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy and Lecturer on History in the College.

Professor of Public and Private International Law in the Law School.

He was born July 14, 1825, at Trenton, N. J. He prepared for college at the Trenton Academy, and entered Princeton, from which he graduated in 1844. He was a private tutor in Virginia for two years, and then began the study of law. In 1848 he became associate principal of the New York Collegiate School, but after a short time he accepted the position of Literary Editor of the National Intelligencer at Washington. He became Associate Editor of that journal in 1856 and was charged with its chief conduct until 1865 when failing health, induced by his arduous labors, compelled him to resign.

As editor of the Intelligencer during the trying period of the war, he occupied a place of singular difficulty and of great importance and influence. The discussions in the journal during this period often took the form of elaborate papers on questions of constitutional or international law, and exercised an acknowledged influence on public opinion.

After his resignation from the Intelligencer, he spent a year of travel and study in Europe. Returning to Washington, he resumed the duties of Clerk of the U. S. Court of Claims, to which office he had been appointed in 1863. In 1867 he became President of St. John's College, Md., and in 1870 he was called to the chair of Belles-Lettres in Princeton. In 1871 he was elected President of the Columbian College. Under his administration the name of the institution has been changed to the Columbian University, a permanent endowment fund has for the first time been raised, large and conveniently arranged buildings have been erected in the heart of Washington, the Law School has been greatly enlarged, the Scientific School and the Dental School have been established, the number of students has increased from 326 in 1871 to 755 in 1891, the number of the Faculty from twenty-five in 1871 to fifty-six in 1891, without counting more than once several Professors who teach in more than one department.

President Welling is connected with many literary, historical and scientific societies. He is the President of the Anthropological Society of Washington, is President of the Board of Trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery, is a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution and Chairman of its Executive Committee. He has written a great deal, but most of his published work, as yet, has appeared in the form of editorials and literary addresses, and of contributions to various periodicals. It is understood that he is now preparing for publication his Lectures on Literature at Princeton College and his Lectures on History at the Columbian University, and that he is engaged on a history of the Civil War in the United States, as regarded in its civil, political and juridical aspects.

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

Organized February 28, 1887.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

This Society shall be called THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF THE COLUMBIAN UNIVERSITY, D. C.

ARTICLE II.

The objects of this Association shall be to unite the graduates in closer sympathy, and to promote the general welfare of the University.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. All the graduates in any of the Schools of the Columbian University, and all who have received from the University any honorary degree, shall be eligible to membership in this Association.

SEC. 2. Members shall be elected by the Executive Committee.

SEC. 3. Members of the different Faculties, who are not graduates of the University, shall be considered honorary members of this Association.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. The officers of this Association shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, who shall perform the duties commonly assigned to such officers.

SEC. 2. The Treasurer shall disburse the funds upon order of the Executive Committee, and shall make a report at the annual meeting.

SEC. 3. The Executive Committee shall consist of the officers of the Association and two members from each of the Schools, to be appointed by the President; of which Committee five shall constitute a quorum. This Committee shall have power to call extraordinary meetings, and to transact any necessary business in the interval between the annual meetings of the Association.

ARTICLE V.

The officers shall be elected by ballot at each annual meeting of the Association, and the votes of a majority of the members present at any such meeting shall constitute a choice,

ARTICLE VI.

The annual meeting and each special meeting of the Association shall be held at such time and place as the Executive Committee may appoint.

ARTICLE VII.

The attendance of fifteen members shall be necessary at any meeting for the transaction of business.

ARTICLE VIII.

The annual dues are fixed at one dollar, and no member shall be entitled to vote who is in arrears.

ARTICLE IX.

Amendments to this Constitution may be proposed by any two members and voted on at the annual meeting, a two-thirds vote being required for adoption. Notice of such proposed amendment shall accompany the notice of the annual meeting.

By a resolution adopted June 6, 1887, the initiation fee was fixed at one dollar.
